Hi Deb,

I hope you are staying healthy and weathering the virus. With the Center for Disease Control (CDC) here in the US recommending events with 250 or more attendees to cancel or postpone, MANY of our events have begun to utilize our virtual event tools.

Going virtual enables organizers like you to still host their event and be able to make use of the hard work you have spent planning. The Whova app can still help you engage with attendees and also help them with online networking.

Whova Releases Virtual Conference Support! Move Events Online during Coronavirus Period

Virtual Conferences

Remote Audiences

Recorded Videos

Here is some app content that can make your virtual event happen:

- Live-streamed Keynote
- Live-streamed breakout session
- Q/A in the app
- Presentation slides
- Attendee networking
- Polls and Surveys
- Session Evaluations
- Sponsor Banners
- Virtual Expo
- Twitter hashtags
- and much more!

For example, we have events implementing this already, but you can have your speakers conduct their talks live and stream it into the app, enable the Q/A tool, display presentations, take feedback, and have people network in-app.

This is all a part of the standard package, so there will only be a fee to the live streaming provider you select. We have events using Zoom, Uberconference, Google Hangouts

(FREE), and even Facebook Live. When you choose one, they will provide a link to your stream and some may offer recorded sessions that you can just plug into the agenda sessions in the app.

If you are planning on holding your event virtually, I'd be happy to discuss this further with you. You can also check out our blog post about Virtual Events here.

Take care and stay safe.

Sincerely,
Braulio
